Reassessing Poverty and Inequality: Theories, Representations and Approaches

Global Research Priorities on International Development
Postgraduate Conference and Annual Lecture, 15 June 2018

All Staff and Students Welcome 9am–5pm, OC 1.06, Oculus Building, University of Warwick

We live in an affluent world where at least 1 billion people presently live in extreme poverty. Every day, hundreds of millions of people experience severe forms of deprivation that inflict suffering and obstruct human flourishing. Development has always claimed poverty eradication as its ultimate goal. In recent decades, this objective had matured into an international consensus with quantitative targets and firm commitments by powerful governments. And yet, 'poverty' continues to be one of the most systemic and endemic problems at both the global and local levels.

This one-day conference is designed to give postgraduate students a multi-disciplinary platform from which to present and discuss their research on this important issue and to form new connections with their peers across different institutions. There is also the opportunity to submit your work for publication in our cutting edge development journal – The Journal of Law, Social Development and Global Justice.
