

Working Collaboratively: The present and future of PhD research

Wednesday 25th November 10.30am-3.30pm
Wolfson Research Exchange, University of Warwick

Collaborative studentships provide unique opportunities and challenges for doctoral researchers. This FREE one day event welcomes PhD students from all disciplines working with non-academic institutions to:

- Identify the key challenges when researching collaboratively and consider strategies to navigate them
- Share research and network with other students - 5 minute elevator slots available!
- Discuss the future of collaborative work within and beyond academia

To register for the event visit: <http://warwick.ac.uk/esrcdtcollab>
The deadline for registration is Wednesday 11th November 2015

This event is funded and supported by Warwick ESRC DTC.

Lunch and refreshments will be provided.

Travel bursaries of up to £50 available for students from other universities - limited number, so please apply NOW!

If you would like to present a 5 minute elevator pitch at the event (discussing some of the successes and challenges of your collaboration), or you would like more information about the event, then please email Wendy Eades:
