Welcome to the IATL Newsletter Student,

IATL's Den Applications Open

Are you an aspiring entrepreneur? Have you taken, or are you about to take, an IATL module? Perhaps you've received funding from IATL. Do you have an innovative business or social enterprise idea? We are thrilled to announce The IATL's Den, our very own platform to showcase and support entrepreneurial talent!

Pitch your business proposal to a panel of experts for the chance to receive funding, coaching and support from IATL and Warwick Enterprise to develop your idea.

Applications have now opened and you can apply by yourself or in a group. The IATL's Den will take place on 3 June 2025.

Find out about IATL's Den and discover more about the support and funding you can access for your enterprise venture. We look forward to helping you bring your idea to life, whether that's launching a start-up or developing a community initiative, we'll help you to innovate and succeed.

ICUR 2025

The International Conference of Undergraduate Research \(ICUR\) is IATL's annual hybrid conference, connecting like-minded undergraduate researchers across the world in interdisciplinary panels and conversations. The conference offers attendees the chance to hear about student research projects from around the world and think about their own learning or research in terms of the international challenges that face the world today.

All Warwick students and staff are welcome at ICUR, and we would love you to join us in the audience - please click here to sign up and be notified when ICUR 2025 audience registration goes live!

IATL Module Fair

IATL modules enable you to apply your disciplinary expertise while collaborating with students from across the University, integrating various perspectives and co-creating with peers and staff to address global challenges.

Our module registration for 2025-26 for UG modules opens in March. Come to our IATL Module Fair on Wednesday 30th April 12.30 - 2.30 pm in the FAB Agora to find out how to explore topics from multiple viewpoints, discover new ideas and solutions, and enhance your research skills through innovative assessments.

Help Shape an AI Toolkit for the Arts and Social Sciences

A project to develop an AI Toolkit for the Faculties of Arts and Social Sciences is looking for student input to create student-friendly resources. You do not need to be an AI expert—a range of perspectives and experiences is very welcome. Please see the project webpage for further details about a student event on Wednesday 12 March at 2pm.

Understanding Wellbeing Online Module - Open to all Warwick students

It is important to carefully look after our wellbeing. The online module 'Understanding Wellbeing' can be a great helping hand in this respect, and you can engage with it at any time, during a study break, or winding down at the end of a long day. This module (not for CATS) has been cocreated with students and aims to provide you with a safe space and support to begin or continue your own wellbeing journey, and you can explore it at your own pace throughout the academic year. Engaging with different sections of the online module will provide you with Level Certificates, relative HEAR Accreditations and points towards the Warwick Award. Over 4000 students have engaged with and benefitted from the module in the past two years...it is your time now!

IATL Skills Sessions

Last year our Student Voice reps told us they would like more support to develop Interdisciplinary Skills. This year we offered a set of skills sessions to support your IATL experience. If you missed them, resources are available here.

Calling all students from Social Science and STEM departments

Wynn is a final year student who took the IATL module Your Idea, Your Research this year and is conducting research on how students from different academic backgrounds perceive the scientific legitimacy of social science and what factors influence these perceptions. She is seeking STEM and Social Science students to complete a short 10-minute questionnaire. Can you help? If so, please visit the survey here.

The AI Podcast

A month after releasing their 'AI Ethics now' podcast to support the IATL module 'The AI Revolution: Ethics, Technology and Society' Tom Ritchie and Jennie Mills have hit 500 listens! Listen now.

To find out more about the AI module, visit the IATL Website. YOU could be taking this module for credit next year!

Keep up to date with IATL

If you don't already follow IATL on Instagram and LinkedIn make sure you do to stay up to date with our news, activities and opportunities to work with us. You can also check our website for our latest updates.
