Hello Student,

Introduction

Welcome to IATL's student newsletter, June edition. IATL offers undergraduate students the opportunity to undertake research and share their findings, both within and outside the curriculum. Find out more about the support, training, events, activities and teaching we offer to help you become a confident researcher and research communicator.

In this newsletter:

- Sign up to attend ICUR, IATL's international undergraduate research conference - online or in person
- Hear from students who have shared their research
- Read about student research projects funded by IATL
- Find out more about IATL's modules, including our research module, and sign up for next year

“I came for the sociological research and queer theory, but in the end being able to hear about such a variety of projects was wonderful, and really helped expand my ideas around what research can be. For example, there was a wonderful group of undergraduates who'd been working on a project to create software that could identify dolphins based on their calls. As a project this is miles away from my work, but their discussion of data storage and sharing was really interesting, and provided a whole new perspective on something that very much impacts me. That sense of multidisciplinary support was amazing.” – Jessica Birks-Bent

Project Support Case Studies

IATL supports student research through our Project Support scheme. When a funding call is open, students at any level of study can apply. We have supported many diverse topics, read more about 3 projects and discover our projects repository:

- Read about Prishika Nagar's work on social housing
- IATL supported Bogdan-Remus Pintilie's research on arbitrage in the oil market

- Meifang Zhuo and colleagues' undertook a project to enhance the academic journeys of international PhD students

Reinvention: an International Journal of Undergraduate Research

“Through the submission process I learnt a lot, including how to apply feedback from peer-reviewers, which developed my critical thinking. I enjoyed learning about the process of submitting a research article and the team were happy to guide me through each stage. I found it insightful hearing other readers feedback to improve the overall outcome of my paper. Having a research paper is a thorough and timely process, which can be challenging to navigate, but well worth it.”

- Amy Parnell, Warwick Medical School

Apply for an IATL UG or PG Module 2025-25

IATL are still welcoming applications to take undergraduate and postgraduate modules in 2025-26, so whether you are going into your 2nd/3rd year of UG study, or preparing for your PGT, explore IATL's range of modules and see how your disciplinary expertise and identity can be enhanced through inter-, and transdisciplinary learning.

Understanding Wellbeing Online Module Open to All Students

IATL's Understanding Wellbeing online module, co-created by IATL staff and students, is an open access resource designed to help you explore the important issue of wellbeing. University can be a stressful time and therefore looking after your wellbeing is crucial. We created this module to allow you to learn about the theory and practice behind wellbeing in an engaging and accessible way. The module is for all Warwick Students, is HEAR-accredited and can be taken and completed in your own time.

The WorkReady Quick Start Guide

NEW! The WorkReady Quick Start Guide can provide you with ideas on how to enhance your employability if you do not know where to begin or find the process overwhelming. Pick the Summer Term tab to start your first step. When you're ready to manage your own work experience journey, engage with the relevant stage for your work-readiness needs on the WorkReady Toolkit homepage.

IATL Invites You to Showcase Your Work

Are you a UG or PG student who has recently submitted, or will soon submit, assessed work on an IATL module? If so, we invite you to showcase your work on our online Assessment Exhibition, which celebrates the incredible interdisciplinary work that students produce on our modules. If you are interested in submitting, please follow this link and complete the form. Visit the Assessment Exhibition to explore other students' work and discover how IATL assessment programmes lead to student-centred, inclusive learning experiences.

WIHEA Fellowship 2025 Nominations Closing Today!

The Warwick International Higher Education Academy's annual call for Fellowship nominations is now open until 5pm on Monday 16th June.

As a student fellow you have the chance to make a meaningful contribution to learning and teaching across the University. Fellows lead or support projects, policy development, and learning communities, while also participating in governance and sharing best practice across departments. The role offers opportunities to develop expertise, influence institutional change, and shape the student experience. Learn more by going to WIHEA Fellows Selection Process.

You can also get involved by becoming a WIHEA Member—a flexible way to stay connected and contribute.

ICUR Audience Registration Now OPEN!

The International Conference of Undergraduate Research \(ICUR\) is IATL's international, interdisciplinary conference taking place on 18th and 19th June across in person and online platforms. We invite anyone interested in undergraduate research to join our friendly, supportive event and celebrate originality and excellence in undergraduate research worldwide! Conference registration is free of charge, and open to all.

Register on our Oxford Abstracts platform for access to the full program, Zoom webinar links, poster presentation gallery and more.

IATL's Den Event

On Tuesday 3rd June 5 IATL students pitched their enterprise ideas to a panel of Warwick staff and alumni to gain funding and support to develop their ideas further. All projects began as ideas in IATL modules and were as diverse as a board game to understand the complexities of the stock market, a multi-sensory installation exploring the impact of climate collapse and an app designed to match fitness enthusiasts with each other and events suited to them. Find out more about how IATL brings enterprise

into the curriculum and about IATL's Den, where you might be presenting an idea of your own next year!

IATL Students Demonstrate Game Designs at the 2025 UK Games Expo 2025

As part of IATL's Serious Tabletop Game Design and Development module, students Emma Atkinson (English and Comparative Literary Studies), Pippa Coyle (Chemistry), Kit Liu (Mathematics), Holly Mankelow (English and Comparative Literary Studies) and Issac Pilling (Philosophy) attended the 2025 UK Games Expo in Birmingham to demonstrate their final games and network with experts and professionals. Find out more about the module and how you could design your own game and take it to the Games Expo next year.
