

Hanwen Xu

University of Washington, Seattle, USA

Hanwen Xu is a third year Ph.D. student at the University of Washington. His research interest is mainly on AI for medicine, with a specific aim at multi-modal learning for cancer research. He is also interested in developing useful models and tools with clear clinical use cases. His publication including articles at top journals and conferences, such as Nature, Nature Communications and AAAI. He also served as the reviewer for Nature Computational Science and RECOMB.

