

Dr Nadieh Khalili

Radboud UMC, Nijmegen, The Netherlands

Dr Nadieh Khalili is an Assistant Professor in AI at Radboudumc, where she leads research at the intersection of deep learning, digital pathology, and multi-modal data integration. Her work focuses on developing clinically meaningful AI tools for cancer diagnosis and treatment response prediction. She has a background in biomedical engineering and previously worked in R&D roles in industry. Dr. Khalili is also actively involved in organizing scientific events and is a board member of the European Society of Digital Pathology.

