

The experimental paradox

What is first done in an experimental way without any clear expectation of the outcome

... is subsequently done systematically in the 'certain' knowledge that expectation will be confirmed

One and the same activity ...

two interpretative contexts