

Three types of chaos

Dmitry Turaev (Imperial)

January 6, 2015

Abstract: We discuss the notion of attractor of a dynamical system and show that there exists a type of dynamical behaviour different from the usual dissipative or conservative chaos. This is related to an unbreakable intersection of attractors and repellers and is typical e.g. for non-conservative time-reversible systems.