

General Practice Management After Transition Events (GP-MATE)

Developing an intervention to assist older patients' communication with their GP practice after discharge from hospital in order to improve patient safety

This practice is studying a new communication tool (our 'intervention' or thing we are doing is all about listening to patients). We call it GP-MATE and we want to know if it helps older patients get the best care after discharge from hospital.

To understand the new tool researchers are collecting information from the clinical records of patients aged 65 or over AT THIS PRACTICE

If you would like further information about the study please visit the study website:

<https://warwick.ac.uk/fac/sci/med/research/hscience/apc/qualityandsafety/gpmate/>

If you do not want information from your clinical records to be used for this study you can ask a receptionist to note this or look on the practice website for ways to opt-out.
Or you can contact the study team directly

E-mail: zakia.shariff@warwick.ac.uk

Or call: 024 76 575733