

Standard description of WMS, Divisional of Health Sciences for use in research bids:

The Division of Health Sciences responds to interdisciplinary challenges across the spectrum of health and social care settings. Our research focus is the design and evaluation of health interventions (behavioural, medical, technological and organisational), and how the application of knowledge in these areas changes clinical practice and ultimately health outcomes. Our strategic agenda encompasses population health, applied health services research, methodological development and evidence synthesis; our expertise in quantitative and qualitative methods informs understanding of physical and mental health in individuals and populations, medicine and healthcare in society.
