18 The best features of this module were:

Respondent	Response
	superconductors
	Superconductivity topics. Paul Goddard delivered his topics very well, clear direction and interesting topics.
	The diverse nature of it, yet it still manages to give a good amount of detail to each topic covered. I also like how each part is easily followed with the oxford master series as it then easily allows for further reading.
	The energy of the lecturers and the simplicity of the explanations while keeping them clear and complete. Also, the live demonstration of a superconductor was my personal favourite.

19 Any particular aspects/items needing improvement (and suggestions how):

Respondent	Response
	There is way, way, way too much content. It feels like 3 of the third year 7.5 CAT modules when this module is only 15 CATS. I've realised this when revising just how much content there is to learn. All of my friends are also in agreement, I think this module would be greatly improved by cutting out a little bit of the content.
	Magnetism lectures were poor. Needs to take more time explaining concepts rather than just a poorly put-together powerpoint.
	The only thing I could say is that it is lacking printed lecture notes, I understand an argument against them is that it encourages the student to make their own notes. However, I still think that everyone would benefit from printed lecture notes.
	Having more questions per week would have allowed me to better grasp some concepts, such as susceptibility among many materials.
