Do bilinguals regularly activate the language that they are not using

“Do bilinguals regularly activate the language that they are not using?”

Professor Martin Pickering
University of Edinburgh

Host: Dr Chiara Gambi

Abstract:

Almost all researchers claim that bilinguals access both of their languages, even when they are just comprehending or producing one of them. In this talk, we critically review the range of evidence used to support this claim and argue that it is compatible with an alternative (selective) account in which bilinguals consider only the language they are currently using. For example, we suggest that studies showing priming between unrelated words whose translations are related can be explained by transfer during learning, and studies suggesting that cognates are facilitated in comparison to non-cognates can be explained by facilitated acquisition. We also consider a range of other phenomena from comprehension and production that do not necessarily support language non-selectivity. We argue that such learning may occur during early acquisition and then simply be turned off, or it may continue as a consequence of language use in a two-language mode. We discuss the implications of the account for bilingual language use more generally.

This is joint work with Rob Hartsuiker (Ghent).

Nominations are made by the supervisors, but students are encouraged to self-nominate and talk to supervisor.

Evidence from the supervisor must be provided in the form of a statement (one page A4 maximum) summarising the reasons why the thesis is outstanding. This could include mention of, for example, the quality of experimental or theoretical work reported, highly cited or 'hot' papers, intellectual contributions, scholarship, breakthroughs made etc. Departments are encouraged to ensure that current and future impact of the thesis is also considered.

Evidence of the quality of the thesis should be provided - this can simply be a supporting statement from the external and/or internal thesis examiners.

Postgraduate Research Day: Date for your diary

Woods Scawen, Warwick Arts Centre

Friday 26 May 2023

The Postgraduate Research Day is scheduled for Friday 26 May - save the date! This is a research presentation event to which all students on research degrees are invited (including those run in conjunction with Coventry University). This gives you the opportunity to discuss and present work in front of peers - good place to practice giving a talk / poster presentation, and hopefully also a place where to make research bonds with other PGRs who might be doing something related to your research. There's still capacity if you'd like to join the Team organizing, just let Lucas or Yuqi know.

UKRI Councils Transition from Je-S to the new Funding Service

Below is an update on UKRI's transition from the Je-S submission system to the the new Funding Service. Different research councils will transition at different times during the year. For example, ESRC will transition in May, MRC in the autumn, while BBSRC lists which call will go to which system (links to these just below).

Council transition to the new Funding Service - MRC

ukri.org

Council transition to the new Funding Service - MRC

Council transition to the new Funding Service - BBSRC

ukri.org

In 2023, all research councils will transition from using Je-S for funding applications to the new Funding Service. This means that all applicants, grant holders, research support staff, reviewers and panel members must transition to using the new Funding Service. We would like to flag this for your attention so that you are able to plan grant applications accordingly.

The following site collates information on all research councils' transition plans, and links to specific funder updates can be found at the bottom of the page:

<https://www.ukri.org/apply-for-funding/improving-your-funding-experience/council-transition-to-the-new-the-funding-service/>

Additional information from EPSRC on this transition is attached. Please note that EPSRC intend to close a number of their responsive mode calls for applications at the end of March 2023, these are currently scheduled to re-open in May 2023.

Fulbright Commission - Specialist Programme

Details here.

Deadline: 21 April

UK universities are encouraged to develop a project to submit and US academics are encouraged to apply to join the Fulbright specialist roster. If the project is approved by the Fulbright Commission and the US Department of State, a panel of academic reviewers will then look to match an appropriate specialist to the UK university.

Where a US academic with the relevant specialism is already known to the university, they should be encouraged to apply to the roster.

Doing Research Differently

The year 2023 sees a time of great change both within and beyond our research community. Alongside the changing face of the British university system, we as individual researchers face unique challenges as we journey through our independent doctoral projects. However, we also have a unique opportunity to use innovative approaches to drive change, support a better future, and build community-centered Universities.

As such, we invite researchers to share how their work approaches research differently to drive change. This could be any change - from social change to pushing the methodological, philosophical, or theoretical boundaries of their field.

Paid student research participation at Warwick \(SONA\)

The Warwick SONA Research Participation Pool is a research resource supported by the Behaviour Brain and Society GRP. The pool offers students the opportunity to take part in paid behavioural research at the University. Several departments depend on the pool, with PhD projects being particularly reliant. Unfortunately, the pandemic caused significant disruption to recruitment and there are currently very low numbers of registrations. Please could departments circulate this link to UG and PG students.

The Psychology Research Skills Development Scheme (PRSDS) provides staff members, post-docs, and PhD researchers in our department an opportunity to 'recruit' undergraduate students to support their research. Some of our undergrads are incredibly keen to get hands-on experience with psychology research and to develop research skills, from running experiments, through preparing stimulus material, to setting up, piloting and analysing surveys. You can now upload an advert by filling in this form: Psychology Research Skills Development Scheme. For more info about the scheme click here or contact me directly.

In addition, if you have recently recruited a student for any research or work experience opportunity, it'd be great if you could update the UG Research&Skills tracker.

Widening Participation Staff and Student Conference

Wednesday 8th March: Student Voice: A Widening Participation (WP) Perspective.

My name is Josh Bradbury, I am a 1st year Politics and International Studies Undergraduate and Campaigns and Events Officer for Autism at Warwick

I am writing to invite you to an event organised by Autism at Warwick and to ask you to pass this information and invitation to your colleagues and peers. The event we have organised is a panel, titled Ask an Autistic and is taking place at 18.30 on Tuesday 7 March in MS.03 for those who wish to attend in person or via the following teams link for those who wish to attend virtually. A recording of the panel will also be made available afterwards.

This panel is aimed at academics and staff members at the University as an opportunity for you to engage directly with a group of autistic students, representing every faculty, and learn about the lived experiences of autistic students at the University of Warwick. You will have the opportunity to ask any questions you like or have always wanted answered- no prior knowledge is expected or required!

The Designing for Inclusion Programme has accepted proposals from teams comprised of 22 UG, PGT, and PGR students from all faculties and various departments, along with academic and professional staff. This will help with the interdisciplinary aims of the programme and confirms a desire for this sort of initiative among students (and potentially a module designed around this structure in future). They are currently looking for more staff to join these teams, along with three more students. If you would like to volunteer, or know of anyone who may be interested, please contact Tom Ritchie (Tom.Ritchie@warwick.ac.uk).

The Staff Support Fund to help eligible employees who are struggling financially with unexpected costs or a change in personal circumstances, arising from the current cost of living crisis has been launched. You can read more details about eligibility, and register interest to be notified when crisis loan applications open in January.

For further details and to sign up, please visit the website.

The Doctoral College is keen to work with PGRs to foster a diverse, inclusive and lively research culture across all academic departments. As part of this effort, we are in the early stages of planning a three-day programme for this summer, during which PGRs will be able to showcase their own research and connect with their peers and experts in different fields. We welcome input from PGRs on what the programme should include and how it should be run, so if this sounds like something you would like to get involved with, please get in touch (doctoralcollege@warwick.ac.uk).

ACTIVE BYSTANDER MICRO COURSE

The University have launched a series of micro courses delivered via text.

New staff and non-desk-based staff have already been introduced to the course, but it's now being rolled out to all staff who are encouraged to get involved.

The course explores important and often difficult topics, such as, marginalisation, and anti-racism, with the primary goal of increasing awareness of challenges at work and study, whilst opening our minds on how to be a more active bystander.

To sign up, simply scan the bar code below which will enrol you onto the short courses with will be delivered via your mobile phone over 2 days.

Cycle Training Dates

The University has partnered with Sustrans as part of a Community Engagement Programme to provide a number of cycle training and skills sessions for the local communities hosted on main campus from November 2022 to March 2023.

Learn-to-ride sessions: These sessions are for complete beginners and will teach you balance and pedal action to get you riding and making sure you can start/stop independently. Upcoming training dates:

1st March, 11:30-13:00

Cycle skills: These sessions are for people who can already ride a bike and will help to increase your skills taught include riding at different speeds, observing hazards all around whilst stationary and moving, control of the bike in different circumstances, effective use of gears, and communication including signalling. Upcoming training dates:

1st March, 09:30-11:00

1st March, 14:00-15:30
