Chiara De Gregorio – Research Fellow

Hi all, I'm Chiara. I am a Post doctoral researcher under the fellowship "The Ape and the First Word", and I just joined the APE TANK lab of Prof. Adriano Lameira. I started my 2-year fellowship at the beginning of February. I obtained my PhD in Biology and Applied Biotechnologies at the University of Torino (Italy), where I also did a post-doc on the rhythmic structure of lemurs' songs. I am an ethologist/primatologist, and my research has mainly focused on vocal communication in non-human primates, mostly in their natural habitat. I investigated turn-taking abilities, rhythmic features, linguistic laws, duetting behaviour in lemurs, titi monkeys, baboons, gibbons. Here, my aim is to investigate great apes' vocal behaviour to unravel the biological roots of our language, musicality, and rhythm. I am very excited to start this research journey!

WIHEA Masterclass: Interpretive Phenomenological Analysis \(with Dr Deborah Biggerstaff\)

Monday 11 March, 14:00-15:30, Teaching Grid

Following a brief introduction to some of the philosophy underpinning IPA methodology, the session aims to offer a practical introduction to the experiential approach used when conducting an IPA analysis. The intention is to provide attendees the opportunity to recognise the main principles involved in the IPA approach and gain an understanding of the practical stages of carrying out an IPA research study.

Professors in Practice Network Launch

Tuesday 12 March, 14:00-15:00, Space 20 (Radcliffe Conference Centre)

In a move for a more equitable landscape between research and education, the University has made a concerted effort to determine the route to Professor (Teaching-focused) to enable the development of education-focused staff to have greater recognition within the University environment. This community is an opportunity to bring together teaching-focused professors from across the university to share experiences, provide peer support, contribute to strategic discussions and provide opportunities for development and support for Teaching-focused grade 8 staff.

WIHEA Masterclass: Creativity, Storytelling and Academic Writing \(with Dr Alexander Smith\)

Thursday 21 March, 14:00-16:00, Teaching Grid

This Masterclass will provide a space for discussion and reflection of the role of creativity and storytelling in academic teaching and scholarly practice. It draws on Dr Smith's successful introduction of a new creative writing module for Sociology students, which has had an impact on improving the quality of academic writing amongst third-years, especially in their dissertations. This provocative Masterclass will challenge us to embrace creativity and storytelling in our pedagogical approach to teaching academic writing, as a means of promoting critical reading, rigorous thinking and high-quality writing amongst our students and helping safeguard the integrity of our assessments in response to the challenge of AI.

School of Law International Women's Day event on 05 March 2024

Morning all Inspiring Women at Warwick (Staff)

Next week is getting busy! I'm pleased to share details of this event:

Warwick Law School's ED&I Team is delighted to invite you to attend our upcoming event in celebration of International Women's Day 2024, open to all University staff and students!

Dana Denis-Smith will be speaking about gender inclusivity in the legal profession. She founded the First 100 Years, which tracks the journey of women in the legal profession from 1919 - and is now running the Next 100 Years campaign. Full information and a sign-up link is available here.

Please share these details with any groups you think may be interested. If any other IW members have upcoming events to celebrate IWD next week, please do post them here to share with our community.

Thank you!
