

While you are waiting...

On Padlet: here
Introduce yourself:

- Who you are
- where you are
- where you call home (is it famous for anything?)
- what course you are doing
- something about yourself that you want to share

Tell us what inspired or motivated you to come to study your chosen course?

It may be a person or an experience. It may be an aspiration. It may be something else.

Look at other people's responses – anything similar and what is different about your stories.

You can comment on the post.

Introducing Our values

Warwick value	Education Studies statement
1.Going forward and further	In Education Studies we are ambitious and aspirational. We have a holistic view of education. We take the initiative for positive change and make it happen.
2.Thinking freely	In Education Studies we create safe and inclusive educative spaces in which staff and students can think freely, in an interdisciplinary way. We innovate and challenge the status quo in a spirit of generosity.
3.Thriving on difference	In Education Studies we pride ourselves on our culture of diversity and awareness of intersectionality. We are student-centred, operating with care at all times. We are aware of visible and invisible differences, including differences in experiences, expertise and ways of thinking. We have expertise in multi-, inter- and trans-disciplinary research that feed into high quality teaching and student work.
4.Creating connections	In Education Studies we have a commitment to build connections and partnerships. We recognise the barriers to sustaining this (including resources, leadership, agency) but we hold fast to the commitment to break barriers, co-create and build a community.
5.Sharing opportunities	In Education Studies we empower and supportively challenge everyone to flourish and make a difference, on their own terms, for the benefit of individuals, institutions and wider society.
