Mental Health in Education: New Perspectives from Philosophy

The University of Warwick is hosting a one-day colloquium, jointly funded by the British Academy and the Philosophy of Education Society of Great Britain, to explore therapeutic philosophical traditions in light of educational issues, and in response to calls by policy makers that schools should be teaching about mental health. Philosophers, psychoanalysts and education researchers will bring their experience and expertise to the conversation. There will be a special focus on Wittgenstein and Stanley Cavell.

Colloquium 9.30-17.00
Wednesday 17th June 2020
Faculty of Social Sciences, University of Warwick, Coventry, CV4 7AL

If you would like to register for the colloquium please do so via Eventbrite (use the password ‘therapy’) or by emailing e.williams.1@warwick.ac.uk. Spaces are limited so early registration is encouraged. There is no fee for attending the colloquium. Lunch will be provided.

Speakers: Josh Cohen, Richard Gipps, Joanna Moncrieff, Adrian Skilbeck, Paul Standish, Emma Williams, and ‘in conversation’ with Adam Phillips.
