From Transnational Relations to Transnational Laws

Northern European Laws at the Crossroads

Edited by Anne Hellum, University of Oslo, Norway,
Shaheen Sardar Ali, University of Warwick, UK and Anne Griffiths, Edinburgh University, UK

'This set of highly instructive and insightful case studies of transnational personal, social, religious and economic relations in Northern Europe is at the cutting edge of sociolegal analysis of the ambiguous outcomes of gender, class and status in this age of accelerated mobility of people, technologies and normative systems.' – Abdullahi A. An-Na'im, Emory University Law School, USA

'This is an original critical accounting of legal pluralism as nationalist discourse, read in light of new transnational realities across Northern Europe. The regional focus thickens the analysis – in the process unsettling conceptual boundaries, remixing institutions and intimate lives, and deepening the implications for contemporary studies of law and society.' – Carol J. Greenhouse, Princeton University, USA

This book approaches law as a process embedded in the transnational personal, religious, communicative and economic relationships that mediate between international, national and local practices, their norms and values. Through the lens of a variety of important contemporary subjects, the authors engage with the nature of power and how it is accommodated, ignored or resisted by various actors when transnational practices encounter national and local law.
