

CITY UNIVERSITY
LONDON

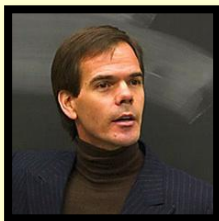

The Critical Corporation Project

ESRC Seminar Series

‘Do corporations rule the world? The role of corporate power in contemporary society’

In recent years, we have witnessed growing anti-corporate sentiment across the world. A wide range of groups are concerned that corporations have become too powerful. Some claim they have become impossible to control. In this evening debate we want to explore how accurate the claim that corporations rule the world is. We will ask what the consequences of changing corporate power are for wider society. We will also ask whether anything needs to be done to stem corporate power? To examine these questions, we have brought together a panel of leading experts on corporate power.

Changing Focus: A Broader Conception of the Firm

Dan Danielsen
Professor of Law,
Northeastern
University, Boston

Debtfare States and the Poverty Industry

Susanne Soederberg
Professor of Global
Political Economy,
Queen’s University,
Kingston Ontario

The Power of Finance and Financial Innovation

Anastasia
Nesvetailova Reader
in International
Political Economy,
City University
London

Shareholder Empowerment and Why Shareholders Shouldn’t Vote

Lorraine Talbot
Associate Professor of Law, University of Warwick

Where:

Room LG001
Cass Business School
106 Bunhill Row
London EC1Y 8TZ

When:

Monday 9 December 2013
18:00 – 20:00

Registration: www.cass.city.ac.uk/news-and-events/events