

CSD RESEARCH FELLOWSHIPS

(non-stipendiary)

The Centre for Studies in Democratisation offers non-stipendiary (post-)doctoral research fellowships during the academic year to individuals who wish to devote their time to research and writing in the field of democracy. Fellows are expected to work on their own projects.

Eligibility

The Centre offers (post-)doctoral research fellowships for up to six months, with a possibility for renewal. Applications for fellowships are welcome from recent recipients of the Ph.D. or equivalent degree, junior university faculty members, and employees of government, international, humanitarian, and private research institutions with appropriate professional experience. We seek applications from political scientists, lawyers, historians, economists, and others of diverse disciplinary backgrounds. We encourage applications from women, minorities, and citizens of all countries.

Further information

Fellows are expected to work on their own research projects and related publications during their period of residence. They are also expected to contribute to the Centre's research activities, such as the seminar series and conferences. Research fellows will get access to Warwick's main resources, such as the library and sports centre facilities etc. with a formal Warwick's university card. We will also seek to offer personal office space with computers (but we cannot promise at the moment); in any case, there will be many opportunities to use the needed facilities on-campus, e.g. in the library. Research fellows are encouraged to present their research within and outside the Centre, collaborate on papers or projects with other fellows and faculty, attend and take an active role in CSD's seminars and conferences, and we hope that fellows will immerse themselves in the greater University community during their stay.

Application procedure

The CSD accepts applications on an ongoing basis. Each applicant should submit the application material as email attachment to t.freyburg@warwick.ac.uk

1. A double-spaced statement of around 500 words that proposes a research project, including its relevance to the research interests of CSD;
2. A letter of motivation, outlining the reasons why a research stay at the CSD would be beneficiary for the research project;
3. A curriculum vitae;
4. A short writing sample pertinent to the application (less than 12,000 words).
