

Continental Philosophy and the Sciences
A Three-Day Conference

University of Warwick

8th -10th December

Gary Gutting (Professor of Philosophy, Notre Dame University) —
What Is Continental Philosophy of Science?

Michael Friedman (Professor of Philosophy, Stanford University) —
Ernst Cassirer and Contemporary Philosophy of Science

Isabelle Stengers (Professor of Philosophy, University of Brussels) —
To Think is to Construct — Why did Deleuze Strongly Differentiate Between Scientific Functions and Philosophical Concepts?

Eduard Marbach (Professor of Philosophy, University of Bern) —
On Bringing Consciousness Into the House of Science —
With the Help of Husserlian Phenomenology

Babette Babich (Professor of Philosophy, Fordham University) —
'A Problem with Horns ... the Problem of Science Itself' — On Nietzsche, Heidegger, and a Critical Philosophy of Science

Christopher Norris (Professor of Philosophy, University of Cardiff) —
'Fog Over Channel, Continent Isolated': New Bearings in Epistemology and Philosophy of Science

Pierre Kerszberg (Professor of Philosophy, University of Toulouse) —
Natural Science and the Experience of Nature

Patrick Heelan (Professor of Philosophy, Georgetown University) —
Husserlian Phenomenology, Measurement, and Quantum Theory

Thomas Posch (Professor of Astronomy, Institute of Astronomy, Vienna) —
Hegel's Anti-Reductionism: Remarks on What is Living of his Philosophy of Nature

Matthew Ratcliffe (Lecturer in Philosophy, University of Durham) —
Mirror Neurons: An Illustration of the Interplay between Phenomenology and Neuroscience

David Webb (Senior Lecturer in Philosophy, Staffordshire University) —
Foucault, Bachelard and Complexity in Microphysics

Paul-Antoine Miquel (Senior Lecturer in Philosophy, University of Nice) —
From an Immanentist to an Emergentist Approach to Evolution: Between Bergson and Darwin

Ray Brassier (Research Associate, Middlesex University) —
Black Sunrise: Scientific Enlightenment and the End of Phenomenological Enchantment

Early registration strongly advised.

For further information and registration details please contact the conference organisers Jon
Rubin (J.A.Rubin@warwick.ac.uk) or Damian Veal (damian.veal@btopenworld.com) or visit the website: <http://www2.warwick.ac.uk/fac/soc/philosophy/news/cps.html>

Sponsored by :

Humanities Research Centre

