

Learning Through English

You should speak to each other in English as often as possible. In class, this will allow your teacher to make sure you have understood the content of the lesson.

Other students don't speak your language and the common language on the course is English. This way, everyone will understand you. You should not speak your language because it excludes your classmates and teachers.

Talking to students of other nationalities is beneficial because you can learn about their culture and experiences. This will broaden your horizons and make you an even better student.

You won't improve your English if you speak your own language. It is normal to make mistakes when you are speaking English - don't worry, your teachers will help you.

The more English you speak, read, hear and write, the better your English will become. This will increase your IELTS grade.

At undergraduate level, you will be expected to have advanced English skills and communicate with people from across the world.

The more English you speak during the foundation course, the better you will perform on your degree.
