

CO/PRODUCING FEMINIST KNOWLEDGE: A CRITICAL EXCHANGE

Professor Akwugo Emejulu,
University of Warwick Catriona Duffy and Lucy McEachan, Panel

Saturday 16 June 2018 - 11.00 AM

Our event, Co/Producing Feminist Knowledge, takes conflicts between feminists as a starting point to explore how feminist activists, artists, practitioners and academics might come together to co-produce feminist knowledge and protest.

Prof. Akwugo Emejulu's research examines how women of colour are often excluded from protests either by structural barriers or by discrimination within social movements. Catriona Duffy and Lucy McEachan are feminist curators based in Glasgow. During The Production of Truth, Justice and History a panel of artists and curators will debate whose feminist knowledge counts, who can speak for whom and how feminist artists and activists might build solidarity despite the very real conflicts between them.

Akwugo Emejulu is a Professor of Sociology at the University of Warwick. Her work explores racial and gender social and economic inequalities and women of colour's grassroots activism in Europe and the United States. Her co-authored book, Minority Women and Austerity: Survival and Resistance in France and Britain, was published in 2017.

warwick.ac.uk/tate @AkwugoEmejulu #warwicktate18
#TateExchange

warwick
tate exchange
12-17 JUNE 2018