Employer Guide

How to optimise

your intern’s contribution

A guide for the Warwick Internship Programme 2022
Employer Guide: Warwick Internship Programme

Contents
Introduction ......................................................................................................................... 4
How to use this guide ......................................................................................................... 4
Contact information ........................................................................................................... 5
Warwick Internship Programme Timeline ......................................................................... 5
Online Resources ................................................................................................................. 5
Getting to know your intern .............................................................................................. 6
The intern’s perspective – what makes a good or bad internship experience? .............. 6
Workforce Generations ....................................................................................................... 6
Characteristics of Generation Z ......................................................................................... 7
Benefits as colleagues ....................................................................................................... 8
Challenges as colleagues ................................................................................................. 8
Top tips for managing an intern ..................................................................................... 9
Previous work experience............................................................................................... 9
Manage expectations and agree what is required ......................................................... 9
Provide ongoing feedback .............................................................................................. 9
Provide learning and development opportunities ....................................................... 9
Recognise value of being part of the team ................................................................... 10
Consider management style and approach .................................................................. 10
Supporting the internship ............................................................................................... 11
Week 1: Starting the internship ..................................................................................... 11
Induction .......................................................................................................................... 11
Setting objectives ............................................................................................................ 11
Weeks 2 to 6: During the internship ............................................................................... 12
Share workplace practices ............................................................................................ 12
Ongoing feedback .......................................................................................................... 12
Personal development ..................................................................................................... 12
Developing commercial awareness ............................................................................ 13
Networking ...................................................................................................................... 13
Weeks 3 to 5: Review and Reflect ................................................................................ 13
Introduction

Many of our student interns may be inexperienced with the world of work and are therefore likely to need more consistent support and supervision. Good management and supervision will make them more productive and enable them to develop and deliver more quickly. The aim of the internship is to get the best out of the intern so that they make the best possible contribution to the organisation. The following guidelines will help you design a high-quality internship:

• Include a defined project/piece of work that your intern can take ownership of remotely, with a workplan and agreed timeline.
• Provide a well-supported and appropriately-managed learning opportunity, with an induction programme, relevant training, regular reviews, line management support, appropriate workplace/remote working facilities and the opportunity to gain wider awareness of the sector.
• Where the student is working remotely, it is important to recognise that this is not just about a physical distance, it is also about a distance in relationship that requires a different mind-set, whilst accepting liability and responsibility as you would for any other employee. This may require o more supervision to support the project and intern’s productivity and wellbeing, o regular communication to offer the opportunity to ask questions,
  o feeding in opportunities to stay connected with colleagues for work, networking and social interactions, o considering the equipment and resources the intern will require.
Please see the Employer Guide – supporting a remote working internship for further information.
• Encourage your intern to maximise their learning from WIP internship by enrolling in WIP: Your Career in Progress e-platform and/or Work Experience Learning & Development Moodle course with their Warwick email address.

How to use this guide

This guide has been created to support you in welcoming your intern into their role. It will help you

Identify how to ensure that your intern is optimising their contribution to your organisation

by

Providing you with the information and guidance needed to provide a high-quality internship

It is designed to support you as you prepare to host your intern, guide you through your responsibilities, clarify what will be expected of you, and provide some insights into students’ expectations.

The content is based on our experience of similar schemes and feedback from interns and employers. It incorporates best practice guidance from professional organisations such as Chartered Institute of Personnel and Development (CIPD), the Institute of Student Employers (ISE) and ASET, the work based and placement learning organisation.

At the end of this guide there is a useful checklist to support in; preparing for your intern, starting the internship, areas to consider during and completing the internship. This is not an exhaustive list, but hopefully provides a sufficient steer which you may wish to refer to as starting point, whilst referring back to the fuller information provided in this guide (Appendix A)

Contact information
The Internships, Placements & Work Experience Team is on hand to deal with any queries that arise:

Email: placementlearning@warwick.ac.uk

Warwick Internship Programme Timeline
Please visit the WIP website to see the timeline and process: External Hosts or Internal Warwick Departments.

Online Resources
From our Internships, Placements & Work Experience website at warwick.ac.uk/careers/employers/internships

- Employers Guide – supporting a remote working internship
- Induction
- Management
- Ending the internship
- Warwick Internship Programme website
- Further information available from CIPD: Internships that work - a guide for employers
Getting to know your intern

This section provides some context and background information that you may find useful to support you as you get to know your intern and manage their internship, particularly if this is the first time you have provided an internship opportunity for a Warwick student.

The intern’s perspective – what makes a good or bad internship experience?

In planning your internship and how you are going to support your new intern, it might be useful to consider the feedback received from previous Warwick interns, who highlighted the following characteristics of good or bad internships:

A good internship experience:
- The way someone is managed is extremely important to get the best out of your intern
- Having a good brief
- A good balance of autonomy and direction
- Other employees are approachable and friendly
- Good support network, guidance and organisation
- Where the intern’s opinion and offering is truly valued
- Regular catch ups
- Feeling like you’re a part of the team
- Being given responsibility
- Clear professional and personal objectives
- Seeing efforts brought to life
- Having constructive feedback

A bad internship experience:
- Not having someone who can go to ask questions
- No training provided
- Disorganised internship
- Mopping up tasks from other team members
- Not having a proper induction
- Not being clear about expectations

Workforce Generations

As the CIPD’s “Gen Up” research highlights, each generation’s attitude to work is fostered by the period and accompanying environment in which they grew up. The CIPD’s research suggests that there are four generations represented in the workforce, by year of birth:

- 1946-1960: Baby boomers – post war generation, equate visibility/authority with success
- 1961-1980: Generation X – children of the Baby Boomers. Generally not as career minded, used to recession and austerity, generation that began the technological revolution
- 1981-1995: Generation Y/Millennials – grew up during the credit boom, benefitted from the technological revolution
- 1996- now: Generation Z – growing up during recession and austerity, aware that failure can have harsh consequences, concerned about financial stability, ‘Digital Natives’ (lifelong use of communications and media technologies e.g. internet, social media, personal devices), mindful of impact of Brexit and environmental change.

Each generation brings divergent skills, learning styles, and expectations around reward. Tension between generations is beneficial as it forces everyone to consider diverse perspectives, and for society as a whole to move forward, but generation culture “wars” are largely a media fabrication! There are practical implications for attracting, retaining and managing each generation. Given that the majority of the existing staff in your organisation are statistically unlikely to be Generation Z, and the majority of student interns are likely to be Generation Z, you may find it useful to take account of the implications of this research for both managing Generation Z interns and considering the working relationships with the teams of existing staff they will join.

Characteristics of Generation Z

Your Gen Z intern’s attitude to work will be vastly different from those of previous generations, and it may be helpful to consider some of the likely characteristics of Generation Z which you may find in your interns:

| Thrive on knowing where they fit within the bigger picture | i.e. prefer well-defined chains of command and teaching-style leadership (especially earlier on in the internship). Be clear in your instructions and expectations and they’ll gain the confidence to innovate, make suggestions or anticipate what’s needed. |
| Seek friendly & flexible work environment | i.e. may prefer to work at their desks for certain tasks and from a collaborative open space (where available) for another. May prefer to read e-mail and update presentations on iPads, which could appear overly informal in some settings. Share your expectations around working culture, or adapt to their way of working if you have the flexibility. |
| Thrive on private time | This will allow them to exercise their innovative ability. They will be able use this independent time to think, tinker and explore new ideas. Again, share your expectations and reach a compromise if you feel that this presents a challenge in your working culture. |
| Motivated by recognition (feedback) & rewards (meaningful work) | i.e. want to be listened to and valued for their opinions, they may also be more focussed on tangible outcomes than their own personal development. If you expect them to work towards less tangible outcomes, be clear about how these add value to your organisation, particularly if you need them to develop skills or confidence before engaging with more tangible tasks. |
| Desire to learn new job skills | i.e. strong desire to grow and keen to progress. Offer feedback on apparent progress, and where more progress could be made. |
| Blurring lines between work and personal life | Beyond the workplace, they will continue to blur the lines between personal and work lives as they expect to have fun at work and stay connected digitally 24/7. Gen Z are more likely to bring their “authentic selves” to work every day and expect colleagues to respond to them, personally and professionally, in the same way. |
Realistic about job longevity

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Benefits as colleagues</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Goal-oriented</td>
<td>Generation Z is driven and focused on getting their dream job. They have a can-do attitude and relish rising to the challenge.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Keen to progress</td>
<td>Focused on the opportunity for growth rather than salary.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Entrepreneurial &amp; enthusiastic</td>
<td>Their approach is likely to be: “I think globally, I will be resourceful, I will succeed”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Innovative</td>
<td>Open to new ideas and ways of working. Asks “Why do we do this?” “Why can’t we do it differently?” “Why don’t we do it this way?” They’re grateful for the opportunity. The world’s their oyster.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tech-savvy</td>
<td>At least 15 years on from the first e-mail systems, these generations prefer greater, more immediate interaction through email and social media. They have strong technological understanding and an ability to adapt what they know to different platforms.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Collaborative</td>
<td>Team players who use a range of digital tools to facilitate team work.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Challenges as colleagues</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Lack ‘working life’ skills &amp; commercial awareness</td>
<td>Not many of these interns have had the opportunities to ‘learn by doing’. These interns need to realise that by being more commercially aware they will be able to add more value to an organisation.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lack self-awareness &amp; confidence</td>
<td>Lack of confidence is often a key challenge for Gen Z to overcome and can often be influenced by life circumstances. While confidence may be difficult to actively build, work experience has a significant role to play.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Need for immediacy</td>
<td>The immediacy of information that Generation Z are used to has had two main effects: more ‘clutter’ – i.e. more information available than ever before, and more distilled – i.e. ‘bite-size’ and refined. Their interaction with technology has enhanced their ability to sift through communication for the essentials. Consequently, they have greater impatience for the right information. Communication needs to be clear and to-the-point, as well as honest and up-front.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ask, need &amp; want constant feedback</td>
<td>They are used to instantaneous technology, want instant answers and seek immediate gratification. Feedback therefore needs to be clear, to the point, honest and up-front.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

As an employer you will be able to help the intern become more work-ready for a future job role, whether within your own organisation, or elsewhere. Helping them to build self-awareness is also a helpful base for developing confidence. Only by knowing their strengths and weaknesses, and learning how to address them, will the interns learn to be more aware and able to increase their own confidence.
Top tips for managing an intern

According to the Institute of Student Employers the quality of the experience is heavily influenced by managers to whom they (interns) are reporting to. To quote a previous Warwick Intern:

“The way someone is managed is extremely important. Provide your intern with the support and guidance that they need and steer them in the right direction from the off, but do not be overbearing - trust in your intern to deliver high quality work to tight deadlines and be assured that if you have given them a good brief and made yourself approachable then they will come to you for help and advice. Being a good manager is so important if you want to get the best out of your intern/ employee”. Warwick Intern, 2016.

The following observations may be helpful in managing your intern:

Previous work experience

They may have limited work experience and be out of their comfort zone in an office environment, and do not really understand office/work expectations, which initially may make them seem lacking in confidence. As a consequence, they may initially perform tasks more slowly.

It may be the first time they have sent a business email or used a piece of office equipment; they may be nervous about using and making business phone calls. They may be more used to laptops and iPads rather than desktops and networks, so check their confidence levels with your hardware before losing time to them trying to work everything out surreptitiously.

Be clear about your expectations around communication, e.g. with emails – salutations, signature, your idea of how a business-style email should look and read.

During Covid-19, many of our students have been studying remotely, connecting and communicating with their student cohort, academics and staff using new technology and learning platforms.

Manage expectations and agree what is required

Your intern is likely to be enthusiastic, keen to learn and wanting to demonstrate their abilities by taking on a piece of meaningful work. Whilst this is great, it is important to manage expectations and agree in advance what is required for the project. You can do this by sharing the bigger picture and the outcome you are aiming for so they understand how the project relate to this.

Provide ongoing feedback

Previous interns have indicated that they value receiving clear, concise face to face feedback. They value re-assurance and will want to understand if they are achieving what is expected of them.

Provide learning and development opportunities

As well as undertaking project work, interns should be encouraged to reflect on their learning and development experiences, particularly in relation to how they are acquiring or extending their own skills. They will be keen to develop their commercial awareness, and having the opportunity to attend team meetings, conferences, and meetings with external partners, suppliers or customers will contribute enormously to this. The Internships, Placement & Work Experience Team supports
WIP interns before, during and after their internship. Encourage your intern to engage with WIP: Your Career in Progress e-platform and/or Work Experience Learning & Development Moodle course

Recognise value of being part of the team
Your intern will want to be part of a team. They are used to socializing and speaking to others, keen to fit in, work with others to solve problems and use team mates for ideas and information. As team members they will bring their own unique insights and ideas.

Consider management style and approach
During the internship, depending on the task and how they demonstrate their ability and as they gain experience, you will be using various approaches across the telling/delegating continuum:

1. TELL - Initially you may be required to provide more support and guidance. They are more likely to need regular support and supervision
2. SELL – You may have to sell your approach; ‘It’s like this because ... And you can be part of it by ...
3. COACH – As they gain experience you can consider a coaching style and work with them to achieve a goal or find a solution to a problem. “Okay, that’s a good idea, then what will you do?”
4. CONSULT – Warwick interns are bright individuals who ask questions, look at things critically, and have an opinion. Encouraging this behaviour will support their contribution to the internship. Asking ‘what are your thoughts?’ ‘How could this be achieved?’ will be useful. Equally testing out ideas may provide a different viewpoint for the project
5. DELEGATE - once they have experience you can feel more confident in delegating. Set a deadline and be clear about your expectations regarding (a) any reporting or checking-in along the way and (b) expected outputs.

During the period of the internship this could move from telling to delegating. This will enable them to feel like they have taken the responsibility and enable the project to progress.

If the intern is working remotely it may be more appropriate to ‘TELL’ initially to provide the support and guidance required. There may also be the need for more regular support and communication.

In summary, your intern will appreciate a management style which provides them with a steer but also provides them with an opportunity to shine.
Supporting the internship

Taking time to prepare for the internship will be beneficial for you and the intern. At the end of this guide is a checklist (Appendix A) for areas to consider including; the work involved, how the intern will be supported, preparing a work plan, etc. If the internship will be based remotely, you may also find the Employer Guide – supporting a remote working internship useful to support key activities from a remote perspective.

Week 1: Starting the internship

Induction

Your intern should have a full induction to the organisation (which may be on-line, virtual tour of your office) in the same way that any other employee would. A good induction provides a firm foundation for the rest of the internship and the intern will appreciate this:

“I think it is also about recognising that an intern will be new to the business and the working world, so actually being ready to provide support where needed can really ensure an internship is a positive and mutually productive experience”. Warwick Intern, 2016.

Please refer to the checklist at the end of this guide for areas to consider around the induction.

Setting objectives

It is important that there is a constructive discussion about both the employer’s and the intern’s objectives for the internship so that both of you are clear about what is to be achieved.

Your intern will be given the support of Warwick’s WIP: Your Career in Progress e-platform which will help them to maximise their internship experience while facilitating the achievement of your organisation’s internship objectives. This module should ideally have equipped your intern in the following preparation - further support is also available on Work Experience Learning & Development Moodle course.

Examples might be:

- Undertake research about your organisation and the environment in which it operates, to enable smoother integration into the team and your organisational culture.
- Develop a better understanding of their skills, strengths and areas for development from the Warwick Employability Development Skills audit, to enable them to work more effectively during their internship.
- Demonstrate and articulate their skills in a meaningful way using the CARE framework, to enhance their learning and understand their contribution during their experience.
- Identify and align their key personal objectives and skills with the objectives of your internship via SMART Objectives setting exercise.

Please make reference to this preparation as part of your discussion, as this will provide the framework for the intern’s personal development and learning.
As with all new employees, the intern may be overwhelmed with the amount of information they are having to absorb, so it is worth staggering the induction process over a few days and reviewing their progress at regular intervals.

In addition to the checklist, further information is available here: University of Warwick: Internships, placement and work experience: Induction

Weeks 2 to 6: During the internship

The main principle for supporting the intern is to treat them as an employee as far as possible, recognizing that additional guidance may be needed. To support the project and enable the intern to get the most from the experience you might want to consider the following:

Share workplace practices

Building on the induction discussion, it is important to share how things happen in the organization or sharing your remote working policy/practice – you may find that there are particular aspects of workplace practices that need to be revisited as the intern settles into their role. The following examples will give you some ideas of things that may need to be clarified to enhance your intern’s integration and allay any anxieties:

- The organisation’s systems and processes
- Key contacts for particular activities, such as ‘who to contact if…’
- The protocols for the use of shared documents and folders on the computer network

Ongoing feedback

Feedback from previous interns has indicated that interns attach greater value and attention to the completion of projects and less importance to the value of their personal and skills development. However, being able to articulate what they have learned and the skills that they have accomplished is an important element of their career development going forward as they apply for graduate roles.

Personal development

As an employer, your contribution to their personal and skills development is significant, and you can support this personal development by encouraging your intern to be reflective about what they are learning. All interns are encouraged to use the WIP: Your Career in Progress e-platform and/or Work Experience Learning & Development Moodle course to think through and record what they are learning – about themselves, their working environment and the organisation. You can encourage them to think that having an area for development is not a failure, but crucial for learning to take place.

By undertaking regular reviews of progress and output against day-to-day duties and the project, you can encourage this personal reflection by asking what is going well and exploring how they can be further challenged. Encouraging interns to ask questions, share information and insights with you will also support the intern’s personal development.
Developing commercial awareness

An internship provides the perfect opportunity for interns to gain relevant commercial awareness, and having this awareness will result in them being much better placed to secure employment. Where appropriate, having the opportunity to attend events, internal and external meetings, meet with other professionals and become part of a wider network will make a huge contribution to the intern’s commercial awareness.

Networking

Research shows that an estimated 80% of job opportunities are never advertised but are offered to individuals already known to the employer. Interns are therefore encouraged to make best use of the internship opportunity by seeking to establish and develop their professional connections. This could include creating their own LinkedIn profile, connecting with relevant professional networks and finding out the effective networking strategies used by their work colleagues.

Being included in social activities is also an important part of an intern’s experience as it provides an opportunity to connect with others in a social setting, and it also provides a realistic experience of working life. This could be anything from a team night out to a conversation about Netflix by the kettle – whatever’s normal or now happening for your organisation.

For further information about managing your intern, visit: University of Warwick: Internships, placement and work experience: Management

Weeks 3 to 5: Review and Reflect

1 to 1 Mid-Internship Review meeting

You should ‘meet’ with your intern around Week 3-5 (mid-internship) to review the internship. The purpose of this meeting is to take time to reflect with your intern on their learning experiences and personal and skills development. It will also provide you with valuable feedback on the contribution that the intern has made to your organisation.

Through their participation with the WIP: Your Career in Progress e-platform and/or Work Experience Learning & Development Moodle course, your intern ideally should have undertaken an evaluation of their progress to date, including their personal development and internship objectives set with you, during the early weeks of their internship.

The discussion that you have, will provide a perfect opportunity for your intern to start to articulate their experience in a way that will support their future career development and equip them for future job applications and interviews.
Thinking about retaining your intern?
If you are thinking of extending the internship at your own cost after completion of the fully-funded 6-weeks WIP internship, please let us know at placementlearning@warwick.ac.uk

Week 6: Completing the internship

Congratulations on the successful delivery of your WIP internship!
At the end of the internship, we recommend marking the occasion with a final summary presentation or report from your intern, to ensure you have each captured everything that you want to take away from the six weeks.

The close of the internship offers a good opportunity to consolidate the best of the experience in the intern’s mind. To them, a final review will bring an opportunity for discussing their performance in the workplace, their effectiveness in bringing their knowledge and skills to bear on real-world problems and tasks, and the personal and professional learning they are taking away from the overall experience.

A final meeting should be objective, with input and feedback from both the intern and the line manager. It is important that examples are provided to support your intern’s development.

It’s also good practice to have an exit interview, to give you each opportunity to feed back on the experience and make any suggestions for (a) your organisation’s future internship hosting and (b) suggestions for your intern’s development.

Your intern may approach you for some constructive feedback on their performance. We encourage interns to update their CV to include the internship experience and to share this with you. Your feedback will be very much appreciated, particularly your insight into the skills and attributes valued in your particular business or commercial sector, so do consider this in advance of any final exit meetings.

You may also want to take this opportunity to consider if you would like to prolong the internship duration or offer your intern a permanent role. Please bear in mind that this will be at your own expense, let us know at: placementlearning@warwick.ac.uk.

For further information and guidance about how to mark the end of the internship, please visit: University of Warwick: Internships, placements and work experience: Ending
WIP queries
If you any queries about completing the internship, or would like to be considered for future internship opportunities, please check the WIP website information, or contact the Internships, Placements & Work Experience Team:

Email: placementlearning@warwick.ac.uk

Thank you
We hope that you have found the WIP internship programme worthwhile for your organisation, and that your intern has been able to make a useful contribution.

We value your feedback and would very much appreciate you taking the time to complete the WIP evaluation questionnaire, which is critical to the programme's ongoing funding, and also enables us to spot how we can improve your experience; the link to the form will be emailed to you after the internship has started.

Thank you!

Internships, Placement & Work Experience Team

Directorate of Student Opportunity, University of Warwick
Appendix A - Checklist for hosting an intern

Preparing for the internship
- Here are some ideas worth considering to help prepare for your intern.

Warwick supports WIP interns before, during and after their internship. Encourage your intern to engage with WIP: Your Career in Progress e-platform and/or Work Experience Learning & Development Moodle course.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Task</th>
<th>Description</th>
<th>Checklist</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Prepare work for the intern</td>
<td>Include a defined project that your intern can take ownership of remotely. This should be delivered within an agreed timeline, with appropriate supervision. If appropriate, it would be worth considering, preparing smaller pieces of work as fillers for lower work level periods e.g. while waiting for data to arrive from a colleague on holiday. Provide the opportunity to combine specific experience with the opportunity to gain wider awareness of the sector.</td>
<td>☐</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Share joining information</td>
<td>Clarify expectations e.g. - where the interns should report on their first day, dress code, what they will be doing on their first day, identify anything they can/should read in advance.</td>
<td>☐</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Prepare how the intern will be supported</td>
<td>Plan the internship as a well-supported and appropriately managed learning opportunity, with an induction programme, relevant training, regular reviews, line management support and appropriate workplace and facilities.</td>
<td>☐</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Meet/speak with your intern</td>
<td>Have a conversation (in person or by telephone/online) to understand their expectations, share your expectations and what you are both looking to achieve. Make reference to any specific project or day to day tasks they will undertake, understand any concerns. Share company policy/guidance on remote working.</td>
<td>☐</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Make practical arrangements</td>
<td>Where appropriate, ensure that practical matters such as a workstation, ID card, telephone, safety equipment and parking are in place. Check insurance cover, enrolment of the intern on payroll, any documents for signing around confidentiality, briefing for GDPR and training around this and any adjustments for disability (if necessary). Please confirm that your intern has a UK bank account and advise them to adhere to any local working regulations if completing the internship remotely, e.g. securing a work permit if working abroad, tax implications.</td>
<td>☐</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Prepare a work plan</td>
<td>A work plan details the day-to-day activities as well as broader project related activities that the intern will be undertaking. It should reflect the realities of working life and include training to support them in their role. Having a work plan will help the intern develop their time management skills and is a key way to ensure the internship produces the best outcomes for you and the intern.</td>
<td>☐</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Induction

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Prepare their induction programme</th>
<th>See below – ‘Starting the internship’</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Schedule time in for regular reviews</td>
<td>Schedule regular review meetings, especially in the first few weeks, bear in mind the frequency for remote working projects, schedule the Week 3-5 Mid-Internship Review meeting and some preparation time.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Brief colleagues</td>
<td>Identify who will be working with the intern and consider how the intern can be best integrated into the existing team/s for work and socially.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Assign a work ‘buddy’</td>
<td>As well as a line manager or supervisor, all interns should be assigned a buddy or mentor to assist with integration into the organisation. This might be helpful with developing professional networks, providing support around career choices, sharing their own personal journey or just answering any questions that the intern is embarrassed to ask their line manager.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Salary and payroll</td>
<td>Ensure the intern has supplied necessary payroll information and complies with Right to Work checks. Employ and set up pay for the intern as per WIP instructions, and advise how they will access their payslip. For some interns, this might be their first experience of tax and other deductions.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Resolve any outstanding queries</td>
<td>For any queries from an HR/employment perspective: www.gov.uk.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Starting the internship - A good initial conversation and induction provides a firm foundation for the rest of the internship and the intern will appreciate this.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Induction</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Information on the organisation</td>
<td>The organisation structure, roles and responsibilities, values, business objectives, history.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Introduction to key contacts</td>
<td>This should include senior staff, relevant colleagues and teams as well as support staff. This could include a previous or newer member of staff who has recently transitioned to the team or organisation.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tour of your facilities</td>
<td>Including break-out areas, where to get food, location of toilets, fire exits and muster point.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Expectations</td>
<td>Clarify working hours, time keeping, taking and receiving telephone calls, absence procedures, use of internet and email etiquette (including whether it’s okay to use Google/YouTube to teach themselves new admin/IT skills), smoking and eating, dealing with difficulties, keeping work calendar and out of office up to date, time off for interviews and outline costs support by the business.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Security</td>
<td>Taking care of ID card, not sharing log-in details for computer, keeping work account separate from their personal account, confidentiality agreement if applicable, understanding intellectual property and any GDPR related issues.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Behaviours</td>
<td>Identify the key business behaviours that are expected (including your remote working culture, as appropriate), such as being professional, respectful, listening, asking for help, working with others.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Health &amp; Safety</td>
<td>A full health and safety induction is a legal requirement. This should include risk assessments explaining risks and how they are controlled and advising them on how to raise Health &amp; Safety concerns. A new risk assessment should be carried out if there is not already one in place which covers the activities to be undertaken by the intern. You may also take the opportunity of hosting an intern to review your existing risk assessments, particularly if they present any new factors to consider, or if you are making reasonable adjustments.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Insurance</td>
<td>Explain any organisational responsibilities around this, especially where any actions or behaviours could risk invalidating or incurring a claim on the policy</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
| First line management meeting with your intern | • Learn about previous work experience
• Understand areas of work they enjoy and what they perceive are their strengths
• Share overall aims and expected outcomes of the project
• Set SMART objectives - project and personal objectives
• Training needs, how develop their network and commercial awareness
• Day-to-day activities
• Encourage intern to consider how they will get into a routine to help stay on track and motivated. Agree when they will be present ‘at work’
• Have they thought about their own wellbeing – how they will manage their time, making time to chat with colleagues, taking fresh air, taking breaks, etc
• A further point of contact if required
Procedures for basic communication and administration should also be covered, such as:
• Telephone etiquette – how to answer phone calls and transfer calls
• Setting up meetings, e.g. via Outlook
• Preferred email format/principles
• Expenses – criteria and procedures for claiming expenses
• GDPR - compliance actions and information |
| Meeting with work ‘buddy’ | Clarify the role of the buddy, how they can contact them. Schedule an introductory and regular meetings. |
| Hear from a previous or newer member of staff | Meeting with a recently appointed member of staff will provide useful insights into what is expected and about how best to transition into the team and organisation. |
During the internship - The main principle for supporting the intern is to treat them as an employee as far as possible, recognizing that additional guidance may be needed.

| Undertake regular reviews | • To share workplace practices
|                          | • Tasks and project
|                          | • Additional objectives
|                          | • New areas for development
|                          | • To gather feedback, aware of any problems they are experiencing and understand their wellbeing. |

| Provide ongoing feedback | To support the intern in articulating what they have learned, skills developed further areas to consider. |

| Ongoing development | Consider the opportunities through reflection, developing commercial awareness, networking and training.
|                     | Encourage your intern to use WIP: Your Career in Progress e-platform and/or Work Experience Learning & Development Moodle course to help them get the most from their internship experience. |

| 1-1 Mid Internship Review | Arrange a discussion of performance and development so far, with an emphasis on re-assessing any outstanding objectives, highlighting achievements and wins, identifying any support needs, and making the most of the remaining time to optimise final outcomes |

| Thinking about retaining your intern | Speak to placementlearning@warwick.ac.uk if you would like to retain your intern. We are not a recruitment agency, there is no fee, we just need to know the outcomes of all our internships! |

| Intern salary payment | • Full details of funding claim conditions and invoicing instructions can be found in your WIP agreement.
|                       | • A summary of the payment process is available on the WIP Programme, website. Click on: External Hosts or Internal Warwick Departments |

Completing the internship – Consider ways to mark the end of the internship in a way that will provide the greatest benefit.

| Share the project/outputs | Ask the intern to write up handover notes, present on the project, produce a video, share outputs or make recommendations |
| Final Review Meeting | Consolidate the best of the experience, objectives, skills development and learning |
| Handover of work | Agree handover of work/digital files/email management |
| Share further opportunities | Consider if prolonging the internship duration or discussion around a part-time, casual or permanent role. |
| Exit interview | Gain feedback for improving your organisation’s internship scheme. |
| Keeping in touch | • Offer a traditional reference in future
• Connect on LinkedIn
• Make a recommendation on LinkedIn (See here for instructions)
• Other opportunities to keep in touch
• Share feedback on latest CV entry
• If the intern has worked remotely, is there an opportunity for them to come into the office when appropriate and present the project, hear from others about their career, network, work shadow, be assigned a mentor or attend an interview if you are keen to further get to know the intern in person? |
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>WIP follow-up</td>
<td>Complete WIP evaluation form – link will be sent.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>