Margot Galez - BSc International Management (2015)

Category Executive, Kao International

"Among the business degrees I researched International Management at WBS stood out to me for the breadth and quality of its partner institutions. During my year abroad I was fortunate enough to split my year between Spain and Canada - a truly invaluable and enriching experience!

The cohort at WBS is exceptionally international, and working with students from across the globe has been a real pleasure and privilege. Throughout my degree the academic and social environment at WBS truly challenged my perspectives and taught me to think critically, skills which have proven fundamental in my current role within a global organisation."

The Warwick campus is an amazing environment to study in. I dearly miss training on the incredible indoor tennis courts and have to admit to feeling slightly nostalgic of my time spent at the library – both studying and socializing!"

What do graduate recruiters look for?

*The government requires all universities to survey graduates six months after they leave to ask about their employment circumstances, through the Destinations of Leavers from Higher education survey. For some career paths graduates need to gain relevant experience, often at non-graduate level. It may therefore take some graduates longer than others to secure a graduate-level job.
