

Ritula Shah is an award winning BBC journalist and broadcaster. She is currently the main presenter of the World Tonight, Radio 4's evening news programme, which has a focus on international affairs. She's presented the programme from countries including Brazil, Jordan, India, China, the US, Guantanamo Bay, Finland and Germany.

She also regularly presents the weekly political panel programme, Any Questions, on Radio 4 and has been a presenter of Woman's Hour and PM. Ritula has also made a number of documentaries for the station.

Her passion for journalism began at Warwick, where she studied history and was involved in student radio.

Ritula is a trustee of the International Institute for the Visual Arts and an ambassador for the British Asian Trust.