INTRODUCTION

Contemporaries saw the Osborne judgment of 1909 as a serious threat to the financial position of the Labour Party: not only would the Party have no funds from which it could pay salaries to successful parliamentary candidates, but also it would have no funds to support candidates’ campaigns. George Barnes M.P. commented “Payment of members is all very well when you get there, but you have to get there first, and to get there a very considerable sum of money has to be paid in the way of entrance fee.” (Commons’ debates, 18 November 1910, cited in Bagwell, op. cit., p.256).

Their fears were reasonable, though not, in the end, justified: subscriptions to the parliamentary fund in 1910-11 fell by only £2,903, and with the payment of M.P. s authorised by a financial resolution in the Commons on 10 August 1911, demands on the fund were considerably reduced (Clegg, Fox, and Thompson, op. cit., p. 419). But this must be compared with a loss of at least £20,000 in the years 1910-15 from trade union funds, an estimated loss which does not take into account the 70% increase in trade union membership in that period (McKibbin, loc. cit.).

The judgment was the outcome of a slowly simmering dispute in the trade union movement as to whether the establishment of a separate Labour Party with socialist leanings was a wise move. The dispute was epitomised in the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants (ASRS) and its General Secretary, Richard Bell. Bell was elected as Labour Representation Committee (LRC) M.P. for Derby in 1900; his expenses and a salary of £200 p.a. were paid by the ASRS. Bell, however, refused to accept the LRC constitution as adopted by the Newcastle Conference of 1903. His intransigence became more obvious after the General Election of 1905-6, when 29 LRC M.P. s were returned, including two (Walter Hudson and George Wardle) who were fellow members of the ASRS. While Bell remained unmoved, his union was shifting closer to full support of the LRC. In 1903 the ASRS adopted a new set of rules which included the provisions that the union would not adopt a parliamentary candidate who was not endorsed by the LRC and the local Trades Council, and that subscriptions to the union’s parliamentary fund would be obligatory. It was this which aroused the protests of Walter V. Osborne, Secretary of the Walthamstow branch, and ultimately led to the end of Bell’s political career.

Having failed to persuade the Society to change its rules from within, Osborne resorted to the law in 1907. His application to Mr. Justice Neville for a writ declaring the new rules invalid was rejected (21 July 1908), but Osborne appealed and his appeal was upheld by the Court of Appeal (28 November 1908) and the House of Lords (21 December 1909). The law lords held that the Trade Union Acts of 1871 and 1876 (34-5 Vic., c.31, 39-40 Vic., c.22) defined the objects which trade unions might pursue; trade unions might not pursue anything not mentioned there. Furthermore, the law lords strongly opposed the pledge imposed on Labour Party M.P. s and parliamentary candidates by the Party’s constitution: to abide by the decisions of the Parliamentary Party in carrying out the aims of the constitution; to appear before their constituencies under the title of Labour candidates only; to abstain strictly from identifying themselves with or promoting the interests of any party not eligible for affiliation; and not to oppose any candidate recognised by the Executive Council (EC) of the Party. Lord Shaw of Dunfermline called this “... an unconstitutional and unwarrantable interference with the rights of the constituencies ....” (Judgment, 21 December 1909, MSS.127/AS/OC/7/LE/3/1, p.182).

Osborne spent the next eighteen months trying to impose his interpretation of this judgment on the ASRS by resolutions to the Society’s EC and general meetings. The EC finally decided that the “continuance of his vexatious interference... was obviously intended to ‘injure and break up the effective progress’” of the society; they expelled Osborne and dissolved the Walthamstow branch, which had continued to support its Secretary (Bagwell, op. cit., p.254). In reply, Osborne sought a second writ against the Society. His first trial, before Mr. Justice Warrington (30 November 1910), was unsuccessful but his appeal was not (25 February 1911; The Times Law Report, xxvii, 289). The ASRS was preparing a second appeal to the House of Lords when Osborne agreed to settle out of court and the affair was finally wound up in October 1911. It is not clear why Osborne agreed to settle and these papers cast no light on the matter. It is not even clear whether Osborne was expelled from the Society (see Alcock, loc.cit.).

The immediate result of the first Osborne case was the loss of income from the parliamentary levies to the Labour Party. As the judgment was followed shortly by two general elections, it could have been particularly disastrous (cf. McKibbin, loc.cit.). Nevertheless, the Liberal government’s need for Labour support was sufficient to compel it to introduce the payment of salaries of £400 p.a. to M.P. s in 1911. This was followed by the Trade Union Act of 1913 (2-3 Geo. V,c.30), which reversed Lord Halsbury’s judgment in the Osborne case and permitted trade unions to engage in purposes not mentioned in the 1876 act. It also permitted the collection of a parliamentary fund, with the proviso that subscriptions to it had to be voluntary (trade union members could opt out) and before it could be levied a favourable ballot of members had to be obtained. Most major unions soon had obtained the assent of their members but it is interesting to note the strength of the opposition: in the National Union of Railwaymen’s ballot 102,270 members voted for the levy, but 34,953 were against it, and in the National Union of Miners’ ballot 261,643 were for, and 194,800 against (Clegg, Fox and Thompson, op.cit., p.418n).

The records of the National Union of Railwaymen deposited in the M.R.C. include 1.5 metres reflecting the ASRS’s part in these events. Both in printed versions submitted to the courts, and in the manuscript originals, there is extensive correspondence between the Society’s Head Office and Osborne, and also with ASRS branches, which shows the development of the case. The archive group’s importance is increased by the fact that Osborne destroyed his own papers from the case (Osborne - J.E. Williams, 30 October 1911, MSS.127/AS/OC/3/13/206).

The Committees responsible for the Centre are happy to take this opportunity to thank the National Union of Railwaymen, both for the continuing deposit of records and for agreeing to the publication of this booklet.

The financial assistance of the British Library Board and an anonymous donor in the preparation of this list and the previous publication, The Taff Vale Case, is gratefully acknowledged.

Mainly letters from branches to Head Office, with a few carbon copy replies and shorthand notes by Head Office, expressing their opinion on whether ASRS-sponsored M.P.'s should sign the constitution of the Labour Party, September - October 1906. They show substantial support for R. Bell and, indeed, for the stand taken by Osborne.

This is an original bundle: 'This is the bundle of Documents marked "A" referred to in the Affidavit of the Defendants as to Documents herein'. It is not clear whether this bundle was collected for the first or second writ taken out by Osborne, but the existence of a second, different bundle marked "A", which relates to the second writ, would seem to indicate that this bundle relates to the first. It is not the 'rather formidable book which is bound in white, and which is described as "Minutes, Decisions, Correspondence, etc. . . ."' (printed transcript of proceedings, 20 July 1908): that book is bound after the Court of Appeal's proceedings in MSS.127/AS/OC/7/LE/2/1; some of the original correspondence is in MSS.127/AS/OC/3/12 below. The papers have been arranged in chronological order. They are numbered but were not found in numerical order; the significance of the numbering has not been established.

Submitted to Sir R.T. Reid and Sir Edward Clarke. (See MSS.127/AS/OC/3/4/127 above, for their opinions.) ASRS ADMINISTRATION
ASRS Reports & Proceedings

MSS.127/AS/1/1/1-47 1875-1913

The "Reports and Proceedings" series compiled by the ASRS is crucial for any study of the union. It comprises a wide variety of reports and proceedings bound together in annual volumes. For the later years of the union these volumes are three inches thick. As will be seen from MSS.127/AS/1/3/1-4 below, the manuscript records of the union's executive committee only cover the years 1896-1900, 1902-5, and 1911-13. The "Reports and Proceedings" series contains printed reports of the executive committee's proceedings from 1876 to 1913. Moreover the printed version includes the General Secretary's reports to the committee, which the manuscript version does not. In addition the volumes contain a large collection of the ephemeral leaflets and other pamphlets which the union produced, many of which have not survived elsewhere.

The year of the document is the same as the year of the volume unless otherwise stated. Items are listed in the order in which they occur in the volumes.

MR Richard Redward

4th May 1908

The resolution made at the Branch meeting on 3rd May 1908 that in the opinion of the members of this branch the action of W. V. Osborne, Secretary of the Walthamstow Branch, is a gross violation of Rule 9 Clause 1 and Rule 10 Clause 8 and that he be requested to deal with Osborne in accordance with such rules. The members of this branch have been amazed at the toleration that has been given to this member and his circular letter to the press on ‘Jany’ and have led the branch to pass the above resolution.

Yours faithfully, [Signature]

50 Branch Sec.
Dear Mr. Williams,

Now that I am returning the A.S.R.S. books to you, I am willing to set the matter to rest. I am having quite a clear out and am destroying old papers and documents. Before I destroy these in connection with my recent fight, I thought you might like to come and inspect them as a good many questions have been raised as regards the soundness of my conduct. You can examine books, documents, papers etc. I will try and arrange for the Chairman and Honorary Secretary of the Walthamstow Branch to be present. They, together with my self, will answer any questions you may ask.

You shall have an opportunity of judging whether my conduct has been straight and clear, and whether the action has been a true one. If you or any person or association has been damaged by any of the proceedings, if there has been any personal in-
If our service is of no value to you it is for you to determine it. As to the £4 150 a year the Wardle has put it very frankly. It is not a salary. It is more than a salary to you — let us be perfectly frank and without any quibbling. I am not going to be such a Craig as to tell you I am going to spend the whole of the £4 150. I am not. I will kick ourselves on it and don't let our constituents think so. I am not going to be liked any more now than I was before. I may have to meet certain things — don't let any one try to persuade because they are going to get the £4 150 out of me because they are not. That is hang in the tail! As much as I can keep for myself I am going to keep, for the obvious reason that I think I earn it. I put in my own time. There are hundreds of our members who say "Look at Thomas! He has got the Assistant Secretarieship and he has not got this £4 150 for being a Member of Parliament. He is all right!" That attitude is taken up I know. But there is another side even to that. This is the point: if the State pays me £4 150 a year and I serve with that aim I have to cease to have any connection with you! That is the position I have to

Railwaymen’s Parliamentary Representation Association

MSS.127/AS/6/2/1

Railwaymen’s Parliamentary Representation Association, annual general meeting, in Carlisle, 4 October 1911: Secretary’s report, balance sheet, agenda, and MS. transcript of proceedings.

The Association was formed in 1910, following the judgment in the Osborne case (q.v.) and the opinion of Edmond Browne, K.C. To conform to the terms of the judgment the Association had to be a separate legal entity, but its officers and members were ASRS members, indeed its delegates were the delegates to the ASRS’s annual general meeting.

The Secretary’s report covers the December 1910 general election, in which the ASRS’s M.P.s were financed by a loan of £1000 to the Association from the Labour Party and Messrs. Pattinson & Brewer, ASRS’s solicitors. The transcript includes an explanation for James Holmes’s withdrawal as Labour candidate for Wakefield, a long discussion led by G.J. Wardle and J.H. Thomas re their salaries as M.P.s and their relations with the Association, and the proposed Trade Union Bill to reverse the Osborne judgment.

Branch balance sheets

MSS.127/AS/2/1/1-50

Branch balance sheets, 1875-1912.
The series lacks 1883, 1885, and 1890. These volumes should be read with MSS.127/AS/2/2/1-50, which comprise loose papers removed from these volumes. Those letters and notes all concerned the drawing-up of correct balance sheets.

The printed balance sheets, completed in manuscript, vary in lay-out and detail (see descriptions below for changes). The earliest include registers of branch members from the formation of the branches and give details of members’ age, occupation, and railway line on which employed. The sheets are arranged in alphabetical order of branch name.

See typed list for greater detail.

MSS.127/AS/2/1/1

Branch balance sheets, 1875. A register of branch members, from the formation of the branches, is on the reverse of the sheets. Includes some contemporary analysis of membership by age and occupation. The balance sheets include details of relief payments.

MSS.127/AS/2/1/2-13

Branch balance sheets, 1876-89. Balance sheets no longer include register of branch membership on reverse, merely changes in membership: new members, members removed, transferred, or expelled. Occasionally a register is given. The 1884 sheets include an analysis of membership by occupation.

MSS.127/AS/2/1/14-24

Branch balance sheets, 1891-9. Membership changes and analysis no longer included.

MSS.127/AS/2/1/25-34

Branch balance sheets, 1900-4. Lists of members receiving donation, suspension, and travelling allowances given on reverse of sheets.

MSS.127/AS/2/1/35-50

Branch balance sheets, 1905-12. Reverse of sheet includes notes on auditors’ duties and printed questionnaire to be filled in by them. Many have been completed.

Press-cuttings

MSS.127/AS/10/1/1-9 and MSS.127/AS/10/2/1-5

Press-cuttings concerning the strike proposed in 1907 to secure union recognition, lower hours, and increased pay, and the 1911 railway strikes.

The proposed strike was the culmination of the all-grades movement 1906-7, which sought an eight-hour day, a 2 shilling increase for all grades, and union recognition. The men’s case was put in The railwaymen’s charter, sometimes known as The green book, which gave statistics of the men’s conditions (MSS.127/AS/1/1/35). Their prime objective was union recognition and when the railway companies refused this, there was strong support for a strike: 76,925 of 97,631 ASRS-members voted in favour of a strike in October 1907.

The Board of Trade and its President, David Lloyd George, intervened at the last moment and persuaded the companies to accept a conciliation scheme which the union then accepted in place of recognition. The failure of the conciliation boards, largely through the bad faith of the companies, was a major contributing factor to the 1911 strikes.

These volumes of carefully mounted and identified press-cuttings mirror a wide spectrum of contemporary opinion: national and local, daily and weekly newspapers, from the Aberdeen Free Press, the Lincolnshire Echo, and the Yorkshire Herald, to the British Weekly and the Methodist Recorder.

APPENDIX 1

A note on the records deposited by the National Union of Railwaymen in the Modern Records Centre

The Osborne Case papers represent only a small proportion of the records of the NUR and its constituents deposited in the Centre. The Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants was also involved in the other equally famous legal controversy of the early years of this century which affected trade unions, the Taff Vale Case, and its papers relating to this have been deposited and form the subject of Occasional Publication No. 3 (details verso of title page). Both are backed by the series of printed reports and proceedings (principally of Executive Committee meetings) from 1876 (listed on pp. 19-36 ), which continue for the NUR to 1953 in the deposit, and by a reasonably complete run of the Railway Review.

In addition to the two groups of legal case papers, the reports and proceedings and other minutes, branch balance sheets and press-cuttings listed in these two Occasional Publications, deposited ASRS records include a number of rule books, (Unity House) Building Sub-Committee minutes, 1909-11, signed minutes of Scottish railways’ conciliation boards, 1909-19, and R. Bell’s papers of the Railway Employment Safety Appliances Committee, 1906-10.

Unfortunately the two smaller unions which came together with the ASRS to form the NUR, the General Railway Workers’ Union (1890) and the United Pointsmen’s & Signalmen’s Society (1880), are represented by less than a single archive box of reports, rule books, and balance sheets, although the ASRS reports and proceedings include reports of joint conferences.

Deposited records of the NUR include the reports and proceedings mentioned above, Political Sub-committee minutes, 1920-30; minutes of Cirencester, Hornsey & Wood Green and Stratford No. 1 branches; office circulars, 1924-46; some administrative files, relating int. al. to strikes, to Mosley v. Marchbank and opposition to Fascism in the 1930s, to industrial unionism and the Triple Alliance, and to relations with other unions, especially between the wars. Relations with ASLEF and the RCA (now the Transport Salaried Staffs Association) feature throughout the deposited records, and the organisation of busmen and signalmen (including by the URS) is also represented. In addition a collection of rule books of some 90 other unions has been deposited, as well as a wide range of twentieth century political pamphlets. Records of the Central Labour College have been included in the deposit, as the NUR was one of its two principal union supporters, and a typescript list of these has been produced.
