INTRODUCTION TO ECONOMICS AND FINANCE

The programme covers a number of exciting and important topics that lie at the heart of economics and finance. In addition to learning about core economic principles, you will also be introduced to some of the key concepts and tools of exciting areas such as game theory and behavioural economics. These will help you to start thinking strategically and to begin to understand how individuals, organisations and even nations make choices about how they allocate their resources - be that their time, effort or their money.

You will also look at some of the burning issues concerning the world of money and banking, including core ideas of finance and stock markets as well as political and social contexts drawing on topical examples from the world around us.

Overall, the academic sessions will help you to think like an economist and will provide a useful insight into the way economics is taught at university level in the UK.

A TASTE OF SOCIAL SCIENCES

This course will give you an introduction to some of our top subjects at Warwick and will include 3-4 hours teaching in each area. The taster programme includes Law, Philosophy, Psychology and Education Studies, all subjects which look at some of the world's biggest issues and which equip students with analytical and communication skills relevant to many industries and organisations.

In Law you will learn about how Laws are made, who makes them and why they look the way they do. The Psychology taster will introduce you to the way that the study of Psychology uncovers the 'secrets' behind human behaviour at degree level, the techniques used by psychological scientists, and the brain and body structures that make us act the way we do. Philosophy will impart important skills and abilities in critical reasoning and reflection to help students to progress in answering big questions about the conscious mind, ethical principles, free will and political justice. In Education Studies, you will consider education as an instrument for social mobility, in addition to providing an insight of what it is like to engage in Education Studies at university level.

PERSONAL DEVELOPMENT

Students will focus on important skills such as effective listening and delivering presentations. The sessions will complement the academic learning so students will get an opportunity to apply some of the new knowledge that they have learnt in an interactive way. On the final day of the academic course, students will work in small teams to deliver a presentation to the wider group.
